Ten teams from the US and China have been shortlisted in the Xunlei's 2018 Blockchain Applications Global Challenge. The selected projects cover multiple sectors and application scenarios, including social network, health-care, public welfare, sports, product identification and information verification.

Startups and professional developers are not only competing at the event as an opportunity for technical exchange but also a chance to access blockchain resources powered by Xunlei's technology and user base. Together, the teams have been invited to develop decentralized apps on Thunder-Chain, a high-performance blockchain platform boasting the ability to concurrently conduct millions of transactions per second.
